Amanda is a skilled human resources professional with expertise in recruiting, developing, and engaging employees across a variety of industries including professional services, higher education, transportation, and technology. Her broad understanding of human resources issues combined with a focus on benefits, compensation, and wellness programs allows her to implement Fahrenheit's strong, customized hiring process. She partners with clients to understand their business, industry, and culture and then strategically sources qualified candidates.

By developing and maintaining strong relationships with clients and candidates, Amanda is able to find the best fit for long-term success. During her career, Amanda has helped launch an employee wellness program, recruit for high-volume staff positions, and train new staff members at a private university.
